Experience

Sebastian Siegele specialised in the advocacy of labour and social standards ten years ago after gaining broad experience in a variety of professional settings. Since then he has worked with major German retailers and in addition more than one thousand suppliers from diverse sectors in 15 countries across Eastern Europe and Asia have taken part in his trainings. Having worked on the implementation of social standards in several hundred production facilities, Sebastian understands how to communicate the issues of labour and social standards to all levels of an organisation. In recent years he has focussed on developing and implementing innovative models for the implementation of social standards. One result is the “SusA Dialogue Programme” which focuses on the participation of workers.

Sebastian developed the qualification concept and the training tools for the WE-Project. He coaches the local trainers in Bangladesh and the project region China North and supports them to conduct the qualification activities for the pilot group of suppliers
